Customer Reviews

My first grade grandson could read like lightning but could't remember anything he read, never understood what the story was trying to tell him and generally became very apprehensive when asked to read anything. He had classic performance anxiety. Having taught in Special Ed., I had found the Magic Treehouse books helped put the most anxious reader, especially those who faced language based reading difficulties, right at ease. As with them, my grandson almost instantly became a part of the story. His reading became more fluid and he would sparkle when asked to relate what he had read. Thank you Mary Pope Osborne!

Magic Tree House #4, Pirates past noon, is the best. I love the cover. I like Jack and Annie. They are sort of funny. I read the whole book in one day. I am five years old and my name is Nate.

Pirates Past Noon Mary Pope Osborne Would you ever want to travel to the time of the pirates? This is a story about two kids Annie and Jack. They have found a magic tree house and travel to the time of the pirates. The pirates show up and capture them. The pirates make them tell where the buried treasure is. They tell them they don't know where it is, but then Jack & Annie find the treasure and tell them where it is. The pirates found it too and leave to get some shovels and in that time something happens to Annie and Jack, but you'll have to read the book to find out what happens to the two of them. I thought this was a great book think it is for people who like adventure books. I recommend this book to kids 6-10 years old and I think kids would love it if they like adventure.

In this 4th installment of the Magic Tree House series, Jack and Annie find themselves on a deserted island, quickly confronted by three not so nice pirates - Pinky, Stinky and Cap'n Bones. The pirates are in search of Captain Kidd's buried treasure and they are sure that Jack and Annie know where it is. With the pirates desperate to find the treasure and a storm on its way, how will the kids get out of this one and back home safely? The end of Pirates Past Noon holds a delightful surprise and is sure to lead you quickly in search of book #5! This is a great series that my 5 year old daughter and I love. It is perfect for kids who are outgrowing the younger picture books and getting ready for chapter books. These books have a picture every few pages, so that helps in the transition of reading/listening stages, I think. They are also a great way to introduce your child to different regions and to learn a bit about history.

This is an engrossing series every kid will love. My Kindergartener loves it. We read these like candy, eating through them in 3 days and moving onto another. It's like we gorge on each book. Am hoping once she reads that she'll go back and read them for herself. She loves the stories. They are just long enough to be engrossing and short enough for her to feel satisfied like she's finished something good.

This is a chapter book, but can be read in one sitting while still keeping a child's attention. I have a 6-year-old son so you know what age. We put on our pirate hats, climbed up into his treehouse and read the book. That made it fun! While I liked the book, I'm not sure I liked it enough to read more in the series.

I do not buy these books for myself, but for my 5 year old who is about to begin reading herself. These books have grabbed her attention like nothing has since we read her Charlotte's web. I find them predictable, and the learning is not done super smoothly--but neither does the Cat In the Hat and various other PBS shows she learns from. The important thing is that she loves them, she will be as inspired as I was as a child to learn and love to read, and there is learning value in them.

This book is my favorite in the series so far. My favorite part is when Jack got caught. I finished the book in a day and a half since it was so good!
