Customer Reviews

The book is adorable and the images are great! However, from the many many potty books that I have read with both my children during potty training, then one is long and boring. The photos are great, and I would just make up 1 or 2 sentences on each page, and my youngest would enjoy it more. But for him, he kept trying to turn the page because it was too wordy.

Potty training can be a trying task. It is however, very necessary. Tiger Tales Books has shared a handy little tool to help parents and little ones learning to go potty a little easier and fun too. Baby Bear and his best friend, a stuffed blue bunny named Bailey, get a new gift from Mommy Bear. It's a potty. Baby Bear let her know that he didn't like it. So, Baby Bear played hide-and-seek with the potty, and used it as a conductor's chair while playing choo-choo trains. Later that same day Mommy Bear brought Baby Bear some underwear with a train on the front. Mommy explained how baby Bear is a big bear now and it's time to learn to sit on the potty to go pee-pee and poop. Author Tracey Corderoy and illustrator Caroline Pedler have created a delightful learning tool for parents. Cheery and brightly colored pictures depict the daily routine of a toddler at play and all too busy to stop and go potty. Simple sentences and recognizable objects make for a fun way to learn something new. This small size book with soft padding is a great way to get toddlers familiar with books. Parents can use this as a tool to also teach hand eye coordination, colors and shapes.
